Your property investment journey

1

Have your loan pre-approval in place

Knowing your budget gives you the ability to make a calculated offer on your property of choice and bid with confidence at auctions. Chat to us about this now.

Choose the right property in the right location

Doing your research is fundamental for success. Choose an investment property with your head, not with your heart. Think strategically and decide why you want to invest—is it for capital growth, rental yield, etc?

3

Make an offer or a bid at auction

Work within your budget and try to get value for your money. Negotiate like a business person, not a home owner.

4

Conveyancer or legal representative and payment of deposit

Once your offer has been accepted, the contract of sale should be given to your conveyancer or solicitor for checking and advice. They will advise you about your cooling off period rights. Once both parties have signed the contract, it then becomes legally binding and your deposit will be paid to the vendor.

5

Final loan approval

As your mortgage broker, we will organise loan documents for the balance of the purchase price to be prepared and then ask you to sign them.

6

Insurance

Your lender will require you to organise building insurance. Most investors also secure landlord insurance.

7

Final inspection

Arrange for a final inspection with the real estate agent. Check that everything included in the contract of sale is in working order.

8

Settlement

Your conveyancer or legal representative will attend settlement on your behalf. This is the day when the balance of the purchase price is paid to the vendor. Stamp duty and lender's mortgage insurance will also have to be paid—if this applies to you.

9

Collect the keys

Once settlement has been completed, you will be advised when you can collect the keys.

10

Deciding what you want to do

Once you officially own your property, you need to decide whether you will manage it yourself or employ a property manager to look after it for you.

Planning your future

Most people make investments with a view to strengthening their financial future. It's important to know why you are investing in property and what your goal is.

Things to consider — why are you investing?

Investing in property is about working towards building your wealth. Where and when you buy an investment property depends on multiple personal and market factors. When it comes to understanding the market, it's important to realise the housing market can be complex and requires a lot of research before you make your move.

When thinking about purchasing an investment property, consider some of the following:

What might the return on your investment be?

What are the costs of buying and selling?

What costs are associated with borrowing the money?

What are the costs of buying and selling rental potential or future capital gain potential of the property?

Making your decision

When considering making a significant investment, you need to consider the pros and cons before making your decision.

Pros to property investment

Safe investment	Historically, property holds value very well and demand is continually increasing.
Rental income	Property in desirable areas can generate excellent rental income.
Capital growth	There is a good chance your property's value will increase over time.
Minimise risk	Your property can be insured against most risks, e.g. from fire/damage, or from a tenant who leaves, damages the property, or breaks the lease.
Anyone can invest in property	You don't have to know a lot about property investment compared to stocks, art, or starting a business.
You're in control	You make all the decisions. And you have control over the returns you get. You can even improve the value of your investment by renovating.
Tax benefits	If you're using a loan to buy an investment property, there are multiple long-term tax benefits available.

Cons, or things to be aware of

Rent-free periods	There may be times when you can't find a tenant and the property will remain vacant. This means you'll need to plan for the costs yourself over that time.
Liquidity	It's sometimes difficult to sell property quickly, as opposed to other investment types such as shares.
Tenants	Tenants can sometimes damage the house or its contents, refuse to pay, or even refuse to leave. These types of disputes can be stressful.
Ongoing costs	These include fitting out, maintaining and repairing the property, building and landlord insurance, land tax, as well as water and council rates.

Property investment strategies

When borrowing for an investment property, it's important to consider your budget and cashflow, including some margin for any unexpected expenses or interest rate rises. Once you've covered all the bases, it's relatively straightforward. Your property's value should gradually increase in value and generate equity in the coming years.

Using equity to buy your investment property

Equity is the difference between what you owe on a property and its market value if you were to sell it. For example: if your home is worth $400,000 on the market, but you only owe $150,000, then you have "equity" of $250,000.

This means that you potentially have access to $250,000 in equity if you refinance your loan. Utilising the equity in your home as a deposit is a great way of securing finance for an investment property.

Buying an investment property through a superannuation fund

Did you know you can now use your self-managed superannuation fund (SMSF) to buy an investment property? This is another investment option and we can help refer you to an accountant to find out:

- What you can and cannot do with your SMSF
- The benefits of using a SMSF to buy a property
- The challenges and pitfalls of taking on such an investment
- Using the correct trust structures
- Tax strategies and deductions.

Buy, renovate and sell (also known as "flipping")

Purchasing a run-down property and then "flipping" it by renovating it and selling it on is a strategy some investors use to build equity and make profit quickly. However, to make a profit, you need to consider factors such as agent fees, stamp duty and home value price trends. With this strategy, you will have to considerably increase the value of the property to make a profit as you will be required to pay tax on any capital gain.

Choosing the right loan

The right loan and loan structure will mean your money works better for you. But with a huge variety of investment property loans available with different rates and features, deciding which type of loan is right for you can be overwhelming.

The good news is that we can help you understand your options and assist you during the decision-making process. We are investment finance experts and we do all the legwork for you. We can access a wide variety of investment loan products, from a range of leading lenders.

Basic investment loan

This is an excellent option if you're looking for a straightforward loan with a low variable interest rate. Basic home loans have fewer features and can be less flexible than other loans. However, they do offer lower interest rates and minimal fees.

Standard variable loan

Standard variable rate loans have more features than a basic loan and may include the benefit of an offset account. Money held in your offset account will effectively reduce the balance in your mortgage account. This helps reduce your interest payments. Lenders will usually charge an annual fee for loans with this feature.

Fixed rate investment loan

Fixed rate loans allow you to lock in a fixed interest rate for a period, which can be anywhere from one to five years. This means you can enjoy the certainty of knowing exactly what your monthly repayments will be. After the fixed term, fixed rate loans usually revert to the standard variable rate, however you can often refinance to another fixed term if that suits you better.

Split loan

A split loan offers you the option of having part of your loan fixed and part variable. This gives you the benefits of both loans in a single home loan. Your mortgage broker can explain more about this type of loan.

Interest only loan

An interest only loan allows you to minimise mortgage repayments and outgoing costs in the short term. They require you to pay just the interest on the loan—which is usually tax deductible. An interest-only loan could be a good idea if you are investing on a tight budget and require the rental income from the property to cover all your costs. It may be possible to organise an interest-only period for a set term, then allow the loan to revert to a variable rate principal and interest loan after it ends. We can help you decide if this type of loan suits your circumstances.

What is negative gearing and how does it work?

As a property investor, you've probably heard the terms 'positive and negative gearing' bandied around quite a bit. But how do these strategies work, and how could they positively impact your investment profits?

There are three types of gearing strategies:

1. Positive gearing is when your rental return from tenants is higher than your interest repayments and outgoings. This is considered a positive cash-flow strategy.
2. Negative gearing is when your rental return is less than your interest repayments and other outgoings. This is considered a tax-minimisation strategy – as any losses are usually tax deductible.
3. Neutral gearing is when you earn the same amount from your investment property as you pay in interest and other outgoings.

The advantages of negative gearing

The main benefit of negative gearing is that the loss you make on your investment property may be used as a tax offset against other income earned. This means that you end up reducing your taxable income and therefore your tax payable. We can help to structure your loan and secure your investment property funds, but for tax advice around gearing your property, speak to your accountant. If you don't have one, we can refer you to some highly reputable and trusted leading tax professionals.

Things to consider when gearing

Some taxpayers choose negative gearing to maximise their tax returns and benefit from long-term capital growth potential. On the other hand, people close to retirement age, or those on lower incomes, often choose positively geared investments to maximise their income potential.

Investment essentials

There are lots of things to consider before buying an investment property. You need to make sure you understand both the short-term steps to purchasing and long-term considerations of owning an investment property . This section outlines areas to research and the steps to take to make sure you get it right.

Credit report

When borrowing money for an investment property, you need to have a good credit report. When you apply for a loan, the lender will perform a credit check and assess your financial history, including any previous credit applications made by you, and any payments on which you may have defaulted. It's important that you check your own credit report. If there is something on your report that you think could hinder your application, let us know immediately

How to check my credit report

Sometimes a credit report can include a false or incorrect entry. Checking of credit report is usually free and it's very easy to do. You can check yours by just asking us, or by visiting one the following websites and following the simple steps:

1. Equifax Australia (formerly known as Veda) Equifax.com.au
2. Dun & Bradstreet CheckYourCredit.com.au
3. Experian Credit Services Experian.com.au

How much can I borrow? Know your limit

The amount of money that you are eligible to borrow depends on three things:

- What kind of property you want to buy and how much it costs.
- Your income and savings history.
- Other financial commitments that you have, e.g. existing mortgage, car loan, credit cards, overdrafts etc. and how they affect your net income.

Make a budget around your income and your non-negotiable outgoings. From there, we can help you work out what you are eligible to borrow and what type of investment loan will suit your budget and lifestyle.

What deposit will I need?

The minimum deposit required to secure a loan is usually 10%. However, if you have a deposit of less than 20% of a property's purchase price, you will be required to pay lender's mortgage insurance. This can be a quite significant fee.

How much does getting a loan really cost?

Purchasing a property comes with a lot of additional expenses. These are the associated expenses that you can expect to incur when buying a property. (The ongoing costs of owning an investment property are discussed in section 3).

Loan application fee

This can also be known as the “establishment”, “up-front”, “start-up” or “set-up” fee. It’s a one-off payment at the start of your loan process. The fee covers the preparation of loan documents, the lender’s legal fees for loan set-up, and one standard lender valuation. Not all loans have an application fee.

Legal representation

When buying any property, it’s important that you use a trusted conveyancer or solicitor. They ensure that you meet all your legal obligations and that all contracts are fair and transparent. Be aware that legal professionals will have different fees for certain services – so don’t be afraid to shop around. If you need help locating a reliable solicitor, please ask us for a referral.

Stamp duty

Stamp duty is a tax imposed by governments on people buying property. It varies from state to state. To find out how much stamp duty is required in your state, check your local government website, see below.

Inspections

A reliable building inspector could be very important to the success of your property investment, so it’s important to factor in the cost. A building inspection could save you thousands by stopping you from purchasing a property that requires major structural work or other costly repairs. A professional building inspection report can also serve as a bargaining chip for negotiating on price, or contracts.

Buying the right investment property

Before you invest in any property there are some key factors to consider.

1

What do you want to achieve?

Are you looking for rental yield, capital growth, or both? Is this your first, second or 10th investment? Whatever your goal, you need to plan for success.

2

Think strategically about your investment

If you're looking to maximise returns, consider buying a property in an area that is up and coming. Likewise, also look for property that's in need of renovation or redevelopment. Let your goals define what type of investment you make.

3

The type of property

Look for a property in an area with strong rental demand. Nowadays, people are often content to trade a big backyard for location and convenience.

Buying old or new

When purchasing a new unit, many owners in the building will most likely be investors too. Consider investing in a building predominated by owner-occupier tenants, as they typically look after a building more effectively than investors. If investing in an older apartment, shop around and look for one in a character-filled block that has the potential to be cosmetically refurbished. This provides the opportunity of increasing your rental income and capital growth.

5

Where to buy

Location is very important when it comes to your investment's long-term performance. Look for property in areas that are becoming gentrified or are being redeveloped. You should also look for investment property close to amenities such as public transport and schools.

6

When to buy

The best time to buy an investment property is when everyone else isn't buying! Take advantage of periods when auction clearance rates are low or falling. This will give you more power to negotiate on the price. If you're unsure, chat to us—we know the property market, so we can help you time your investment.

What you can afford

We're here to help you decide how much you can afford to spend and repay before you even look for a property. We can also help you with getting a pre-approved loan, setting aside some funds for acquisition and holding costs, as well as designing a financial buffer for an emergency or a rise in interest rates.

8

How you'll set up your purchase

It can often be advantageous to own your investment property in an entity (buying in your company name, super fund or a trust) that protects your assets and legally reduces your tax. Talk to your accountant about tax minimisation strategies.

9

Expert advice when buying your investment property

When purchasing an investment property, seek the advice of an accountant, a property strategist, a mortgage broker (that's us) and a solicitor. This will help ensure your investment is a success.

Research before you buy — know your market

Before you purchase an investment property, research the market and seek professional advice. Here are some other things to consider that we can help you with:

1

Know where the market is within the property cycle. This gives you a better chance of finding a property at the right price.

2

Find a property that's close to local amenities such as schools, public transport, parks, restaurants and cafes.

3

Look for areas experiencing population growth as this will increase demand for your property both with tenants and prospective buyers.

4

Search for a property that fits with your investment strategy.

5

Research current sale prices against historical sale prices to get an idea of growth.

6

With our help as your mortgage broker, find the loan that fits your goals and lifestyle.

Get pre-approval

A loan pre-approval provides you with proof that a lender considers you eligible to borrow a certain amount. With pre-approval you can bid and negotiate with confidence.

Documents you will need for pre-approval:

Evidence of your deposit, which ideally should be at least 10% of what you want to borrow.

A budget showing your regular expenditure. This is called your living expenses and must be very accurate. We'll work with you to put this together for the lender.

Evidence of your savings history.

A letter from your employer confirming your employment or a copy of your employment contract.

Your last two tax returns, with details of income from salary and investments (if you have any).

At least the last three month's payslips.

Settlement

After you have made a successful offer or bid on a property, you enter into the settlement stage. This is the last step in the process, where you finalise your investment loan and do all the paperwork to make your property legally yours. We help you throughout these final steps, and beyond.

What happens on settlement day?

Settlement day is when you legally take ownership of your new property. Lots of things happen at once, including transferring finances and signing legal documents. It can be a little hectic—having a mortgage broker helps reduce the stress, so you can focus on getting your investment ready to make a return.

On settlement day:

We arrange for your lender to transfer the agreed amount to the vendor.

You receive the title of the property and the vendor's solicitor or bank will arrange for the Registrar General to register the transfer of the property into your name.

Both parties are required to advise the agent in writing that settlement has occurred, allowing the agent to release the keys to you.

Preparing for long-term gain

Once your investment property is legally yours, you need to decide on a strategy to ensure that you receive a good return on your investment.

Managing your investment property

Once you've purchased your investment property, it's up to you to ensure the property is well-managed. You can either do this yourself—or hire a property manager to do it for you.

There are pros and cons to both options.

Managing your property yourself

If you choose to manage the property yourself, you won't need to pay management fees. However, you will be solely responsible for taking control of all aspects your property, including managing your property's legal compliance with landlord regulations.

Hiring a property manager

If you choose to hire a property manager (typically a real estate agent), the management fees are tax deductible and you will not have to worry about things like collecting rent, finding new tenants, or dealing with tenant's issues.

Responsibilities of a property manager include:

- Understanding the laws of property investment, including the landlord and tenant's rights and responsibilities
- Taking out building and landlord insurance
- Finding the most suitable tenants, including conducting reference checks
- Showing the property to potential tenants
- Establishing a residential tenancy agreement and then completing a condition report
- Acquiring a bond and rent advance from new tenants
- Chasing rent payments and reviewing rent prices
- Conducting building and pest inspections
- Ensuring all basic utilities are installed and in good working order
- Organising and paying for repairs, maintenance and renovations if required

Benefits of using a property manager

They will secure suitable tenants.

Property managers work quickly, so you'll start earning rental income sooner.

Less work for you.

They'll manage emergencies, day or night.

A property manager will collect rent, organise inspections, stay on top of pest control and coordinate maintenance.

Questions to ask potential property managers

When choosing a property manager, it is important to find a company that knows the local area, has connections with good tradesmen in case of an emergency, and that you feel confident managing one of your biggest assets.

Below are some questions you could ask a potential property manager to see if they are the right fit for you.

Questions to consider:

- Do I choose the tenant or do you?
- What happens if I want to sell my property?
- Who pays for maintenance? Is it included in the fees?
- How do we agree on a rental price?
- How do I know my property will be looked after?
- Do you carry out regular inspections?
- What happens if a tenant doesn't pay their rent?
- What happens if a tenant damages my property?

The costs of using a property manager

Most property manager's fees include an initial first month's rent and a commission percentage of the rent on an ongoing basis. They may also charge additional fees for administration duties, inspection costs and advertising.

Costs of owning an investment property

Owning an investment property comes with ongoing costs. Making sure you understand what these are is important because they affect your budget and your overall net profit. While some of these expenses can be claimed back in tax—not all of them can.

Here's a list of ongoing costs.

Council and government taxes

These are unavoidable—but they vary from state to state, so make sure you find out what the rates are in your area.

Body corporate fees

Also known as strata fees or strata rates. These are usually paid on a quarterly basis and help pay for the maintenance of the building and common areas. Only payable where a body corporate exists.

Property compliance

National residential tenancy laws require landlords to ensure rented premises are maintained in good order. This includes all gas and electrical appliances provided by the landlord, which must be safe to use and properly maintained.

Property management fees

A property manager costs approximately 7-10% of your total rental income. However, in many cases this service fee is tax deductible.

Repairs and maintenance costs

This cost will vary depending on the property. Many property investors prefer to purchase new properties to minimise these costs. However, it makes sense to have additional funds put away in case you need to make emergency repairs.

Tips for future investments

Once you begin to receive regular income and your investment property begins paying for itself, you may consider adding to your portfolio. If this is the case, we can help. Below are some tips for setting yourself up to make future investments.

Use the equity in existing property

Make your current property work for you. By accessing equity in your property and using it with the added rental income, you could be in a position to buy another investment property.

Save a little extra every month

Set up a separate savings account and set a target for a deposit. This history of savings will help you to obtain finance for another property.

Mortgage offset account

A mortgage offset account allows you to save on the amount of interest you need to pay on your loan. It's basically a transaction account into which your salary and other cash can be deposited, allowing you to withdraw cash when you need it. The money in the account is offset against the principal you have left on your mortgage. You could potentially use the money you save in your offset account as a deposit for your next investment property.

If interest rates drop

If you have a variable rate loan and the interest rate drops, save the difference and put it towards a deposit on another property.

Stay informed

Staying informed about interest rate movements and new products can save you money. Over the lifetime of your loan, we recommend checking other loan products and facilities that may better suit your changing needs. We also recommend reviewing your mortgage interest rate and equity position on a regular basis—we can help you do this.

Save your annual lump sum payment and windfalls

Consider using your tax refund, or a windfall such as an inheritance or work bonus, to help with a deposit for purchasing an investment property.

How else can we help your investment journey?

Cover all bases. Once your property is legally yours, consider covering yourself against unforeseen circumstances such as theft, fire and flooding by getting property insurance.

Insure yourself

Because an investment loan is a big commitment, we recommend you get insurance that will cover you if you are unable to work due to illness, injury or other unforeseen circumstances. We can also help with your insurance requirements, so don't forget to ask.

Nothing is too small or too big

We can help you secure additional finance, whether it's for buying a new car or for your next property investment.

We'll keep you up to date with interest rates

Staying up-to-date on interest rates and new products could save you money. That's why we'll let you know if anything changes.
